Born in Japan, started to play piano since she was a child. She also started to compose music in early age, inspired by adventure in nature, books, poetry and imaginary world. Her curiosity always goes into something natural but strange at the same time. She puts worth on things which has no clear purpose or meaning, but is nicely surprising, usually hidden behind one thin layer. She gives chance people to try to put attention for it, when you see it carefully, listen it with closed eyes, touch it, smell it, then more and more things coming out to your sense.

She was always playing music solo / with people in her life. She graduated National University of fine arts and music. While she was in university, she created installation space covered with 300 rolls of toilet papers, turned into anechoic space. She also joined to experimental noise music meditation performance, classical piano concerts and some wild recordings. She teaches music for adults, children, and children groups in Berlin.
